

THE WARKENTIN PRIZE

Dr. Benno Warkentin was an international scholar, teacher and mentor in the field of soil science. He believed that young scientists should publish their findings as a means to advance the science of soil and to recognize the contribution that soil science research continues to make towards human welfare. A prize of $500 has been established to recognize an outstanding recent graduate or current student who has published a refereed article or graduate thesis in the field of Soil Science.

Eligibility

1. Open to Canadian Citizen, Permanent Resident, and International
2. The applicant or nominee must be a current PRSSS member
3. Previous recipients of the award are not eligible for subsequent awards

Applications and Nominations Requirements:

1. Student's name, institution attended, and most recent degree
 - a. If nominating a student, please include the nominator's name and contact information as well as the nominee's name and contact information
2. Copy of published article or thesis for evaluation
 - . If the article is multi-authored, provide a clear statement of the student's contribution
 - a. Only one article or thesis may be submitted
3. Graduate theses, peer-reviewed publications that have been accepted, or peer-reviewed publications in press are eligible
4. A clear statement of the student's contribution to the specific area of Soil Science
5. A brief statement outlining the significance of the research to the public
6. A maximum of two letters of support, but not required

Nominations and Applications will be held in confidence by the PRSSS Awards Committee. The recommendation of the Awards Committee will be forwarded to the President of PRSSS and the Dean, Faculty of Land and Food Systems by the Chair of the Awards Committee.